Item 1. Business

Edge Logistics is presented in this demo as a privately held, non-asset freight brokerage that arranges dry van, refrigerated and flatbed truckload capacity through contracted motor carriers.

In this illustrative profile the brokerage has 18,000 active contracted carriers and 410 employees, of whom 300 work in carrier sales and customer service.

Its carrier network can cover surge freight quickly, and it offers spot and contract truckload, partial truckload and LTL through partner carriers.

Its ten largest shippers generated 41% of revenue in 2025 in this synthetic profile.

It quotes tender acceptance of 90% on contracted lanes, supported by a digital load board and automated carrier matching.

Item 1A. Risk Factors

Edge Logistics owns no tractors or trailers, so its service depends on third-party carriers, and its tender acceptance falls when the truckload market tightens.

In the fourth quarter of 2025 its average purchased transportation cost per load rose 9% as spot rates increased during peak season.

Customer concentration is a risk: the loss of one of its ten largest shippers could reduce revenue materially.

The company is privately held and its financial statements are not audited by a registered public accounting firm or filed with the SEC.

Brokers can face claims when a contracted carrier is involved in an accident, and cargo claims are recovered from carriers only after a delay.
